 *Remarks:
 Entire tower from 1937 was replaced in the 1953 enlargement; this was significantly remodelled in 1983. Original installation contained 18 bells apparently by P. Hemony, 1674; 16 (later 12) by Joris du Mery, 1737; one apparently by A. van den Gheyn 1784; reportedly all collected (and some retuned) by Omer Michaux, Louvain, Belgium; thus this was thought to be the only pre-19th century carillon in North America. However, investigations c.2003 confirmed old suspicions that the "Hemony" bells were forgeries made by Michaux (or Michiels) using plaster casts of bells which existed elsewhere. The duMery bells have been traced to St.Salvatorkerk, Harelbeke, Belgium. One original bell (broken) was replaced in the 1953 enlargement, and the two smallest duMery originals were replaced in the 1977 enlargement. Meeks, Watson & Co. replaced top 20 in 2006; dedicated 10 June.

 *Remarks:
 For disposition of 18 Taylor trebles removed in 1966, see

DAYTON - BW, USA - OH
 in 'Chimes' section.
 Bells silenced in early 1990s because of structural problems with the tower. It was razed in 2004-5, and rebuilt exactly as the original, but with only automatic play of the entire expanded range; partial provision was made for future addition of manual action if funds can be found to add an elevator, lavatory and other items apparently needed to comply with local codes for human use; but new 4th octave has no internal clappers to support that. Disposition of 18 P&F trebles and the manual keyboard removed in 2004-5 is unknown.
 Original practice keyboard by Taylor, formerly in Graves Hall, went to the late Suzanne Magassy in Australia; current location unknown.

 *Remarks:
 1966 expansion was 2 trebles borrowed from Cranbrook's disused duplicates, cast in 1928.
 1974 work replaced #31-53,54-55, which were put into storage, and cast #56-68 but did not install them.
 1976 console changed transposition, and had space for a half octave of those trebles, but they were never installed. Three practice consoles:
 original Taylor (renovated 1992), Meeks & Watson (new 1992),
 and Dutch standard.
 The 2011 restoration involved reversion to the 1936 Taylor console and treble bells, with new clappers. The 1976 console, the 3 octaves of 1974 trebles and their clappers are in storage, but the disposition of the 2 borrowed Cranbrook trebles has not been reported.

Bourdon of 1911 retained and retuned for carillon; there is space in the belfry for a future manual console (though access through organ is awkward).

*Remarks:
 45 bells cast by E.& A.Bollée (or Bollée et Fils, Le Mans) in 1866, and exhibited at Exposition Universelle in Paris in 1867. 44 bells delivered.
 Although the range was 4 octaves, the lowest 2 octaves had many missing semitones. Structural problems with this tower caused most bells to be removed to storage. Installed in the "New" cathedral after it was built in 1912. In 1915, 43 bells were in the tower, 20 connected to keyboard in 2 2/3 diatonic octaves, C to A; were played before late mass on Sundays and Feastdays. Structural problems here caused removal to storage in 1927.
 Was reported as 42 bells for years,
 but most bells were stolen over time.
 "New" cathedral demolished c.1977;
 2 bells remain in "Old" cathedral;
 8 are now at Forest Lawn Cemetery.
